

In the video this picture was taken from, the detainee explains: "Hello. This is Corinth camp. As you can see, they give us only one very small bottle of shampoo, or sometimes two bottles, for one month of use. I don't understand whether I should use this small bottle of shampoo to wash my body, my hair, or my clothes. It is only enough for one or two days. As you can see, it is very small. It is only enough for three days, yet they tell us to use it for an entire month. When our shampoo runs out and we ask for more, they refuse to give us any. Personally, they gave me only one bottle, and some people received two bottles, but no one gets more than two. I went to them and told them that my shampoo had run out and they told me to use it carefully so that it would not run out." (translated from Farsi)
